Bioplasty of the Genitals

Female genital Bioplasty

Bioplasty applied to some areas of the female genitals is an esthetic medical procedure that is offering very gratifying results to many patients that have resorted to it. It is a new Bioplasty application that is acquiring a significant acceptance by all the persons interested in improving the esthetic appearance of the genital area, or some aspects related to the sexual activity of the female.

Modern woman is constantly looking for ways to improve her appearance; and now, with the opportunity she has for changing or rejuvenating her body, she will try to meliorate those aspects of her body that she considers not satisfactory. Knowing that her need for self acceptance and being comfortable with herself affects her self esteem, she keeps herself up-to-date with those advancements of esthetic medicine that can help her in maintaining a better physical and psychological well being.

Female genital Bioplasty is indicated in several cases, as for example:

- Enhancing the esthetic aspect of this zone of the body through the correction of asymmetries
- Increasing the minor or major labia of the vulva.
- Correcting the loss of muscular tone caused by vaginal births..
- Correcting the loss of muscular mass as a result of the hormonal changes caused by menopause
- Improving the woman's sexual activity through the narrowing of the vaginal entrance, and thus, increasing the sexual pleasure by a greater stimulation of the "G point";.

Genital Bioplasty has multiple advantages in comparison with other medical procedures.

- It is an ambulatory operation.
- Low amounts of local anesthesia are needed.
- The patient is able to follow the procedure through a mirror and can talk to the physician while the operation is taking place.
- No scars are left.
- It is not an uncomfortable operation
- It is possible to go back immediately to normal life and job.
- There is a minimal edema.

- The results of genital Bioplasty are permanent and have the advantage of being more complete in comparison with other procedures.
- Sexual activity can be retaken 5 to 10 days after the operation.
- And it is very important to know, the results of female genital Bioplasty will improve with the passing of time.

Genital Bioplasty is a very important option to be considered by a woman truly interested in improving the esthetic and functional aspect of the most intimate zone of her body. It will also significantly enrich her self esteem.
